

Arca-Deli© Awards - visibility for products and services

Several products and services from rare breeds and varieties were awarded the Arca-Deli Award in the last years. If you are on holiday in Europe, you may see this label on a product of a farm or local market. With the Arca-Deli© label it is made visible that the product is very special: The Arca Deli Awards are presented annually during the SAVE meeting to products and services of locally adapted livestock breeds and cultivated plants. The award is presented to products and services seen as being recommendable as a model or example of good practice. The Arca-Deli Award label can then be used on labelling of products and services as a means of adding value. The award tells customers that producers value the heritage and culture of the community. The Arca-Deli award can be valuable especially on local markets as it tells consumers that there is a local person standing behind the quality of the product. This means that the niche products associated with locally adapted breeds and varieties become, on a small scale, more competitive and more economically viable. It also reminds customers that they are an important part of the conservation of their living heritage.

The following products and services have been awarded up to now:

Hutewaldhof

Hutewaldhof with Anger Sattelpigs

Hutewaldhof raises and breeds Angler Saddleback pigs year-round in open pastures. All fattening pigs are kept well over a year old. They are fed only a small amount of grain, as well as hay. In autumn, the pigs are allowed into the forest.

The ham is processed by a local butcher (Karsten Lankat in Dannenberg): brined, seasoned, smoked, and then dried in the farm's own cold storage for 1-4 months (depending on how quickly it sells).

Honey of the Black Bee

Imkerij de Kroontjes is owned by Laurens Kikkert. He has been an active beekeeper again since 2015, having learned the trade from his mother in his youth. Laurens has approximately 30 colonies of the black bee, spread across various locations on Texel. In total, there are 17 beekeepers on Texel who collectively keep about 150 colonies. Together, they work to preserve the black bee.

Feijão Tarreste

The Tarreste bean is native to the Serra de Peneda, near the border between Portugal and Galicia in Spain where it is grown on terraced slopes. The small kidney-shaped bean has a thin skin in a large variety of shapes and colors, primarily beige but also white, yellow, chestnut brown, black and red, and can be plain or speckled. The plant is semi-climbing with average precocity and produces small, hard pods.

The bean keeps its shape during cooking, the inside becoming creamy and velvety, and it has an intense

Cachena Veal Meat

The calves are strong, robust and grown adequately fast. The beef is of a high quality and has a Portuguese protected standard and name. They have a good carcass yield and meat to bone ratio with hardly any waste. The Cachena cattle breed was originally raised as a triple purpose breed that was good as draft cattle, used for their milk and meat. They are no longer used for their milk or as a draft cattle breed but only for their beef.

Inchixa Pea

On Sa Laurera farm we recover and grow one landrace of grass pea traditionally cultivated in Campidano and Marmilla subregions (southern Sardinia), called Inchixa. The name derives from the catalan Guixa (= grass pea) (Paulis, 1992). Other Sardinian local names for grass pea are Denti de b'À'cia, Piseddu, Pisu-faa, Pisu a tres atzas. Propagation material used to start the recovering of the landrace derives from small-scale cultivations of our relatives, who have mostly cultivated this crop for self-consumpt

Grey cattle salami with paprika

This entry was an opportunity to taste the products of both water buffalo and Hungarian grey cattle, seasoned in the Hungarian way, with spicy paprika. The animals are kept in the national park and graze free-range as a part of a scheme to conserve genetic diversity and protect the natural assets of the area. Linking the national parks with local breeds and local projects is a concept that the SAVE Foundation supports and the Szomor Salami Production Plant is a good example of how this can be done well.
